

Lula Woicinski White

LIFE

White's sister, Mishler Clyburn, told The New York Daily News that she felt she lost her best friend. "My sister was a wonderful, caring person — a God-loving person," Clyburn said. "She loved the people in her church. They were all her best friends. White's husband died a few months ago, according to Clyburn. Now the family must come to grips with White's death as well. "The whole family is very devastated," Clyburn told the Daily News. "I don't know where we're going from here."

TWEET

Carlos Dieguez
@carlosdieguez

Follow

Hello Lula, we are really sorry with what happen to you, but don't worry we're working to make America every year safer. We're making a magazine to inform people about these cases and how to prevent things like that to happen.

Reply Retweet Favorite More

5:50 PM - 5 Nov 2017 · Embed this Tweet

AMENDMENT

I think that there should be a law or an amendment that authorizes the government to control the sale of guns, maybe some law that protects the people that have mental illness. We have seen that most of the people that are responsible for mass shootings are people with mental illness or with a suicide intention, so the gun shops should check and investigate deeply the people that buy. I probably would have made the following amendment: "The people have the right to bear arms but they must pass an obligatory process of investigation on your records but one month after the process the citizen is able to get the gun only if you are a citizen for at least 1 year."

STATISTIC

Another senseless death